

Male & Female Infertility: Effective Natural Solutions

Presented by Angela Hywood, ND - September 24-25, 2011

The incidence of male and female infertility is increasing in Western society. The causes are many and varied and often reflect the consequences of our modern lifestyle and environment. For this reason, the treatment of infertility presents naturopathic practitioners with both a challenging and rewarding aspect to clinical practice.

Seminar Objectives:

Angela Hywood specialises in natural fertility, successfully helping many couples to conceive and deliver healthy babies. This two-day seminar will review the evidence and practical application of herbal and nutritional strategies for infertility, illustrated by Angela's own case histories.

Key Clinical Takeaways:

This seminar will highlight effective natural strategies for treating infertility from a leader in the field. Detailed protocols will be provided and relevant pathology tests will be discussed to provide you with the tools to interpret the results for clinical use. Participants will leave the seminar with useful information that can be applied immediately into their practices.

About The Speaker

Angela Hywood, ND is an experienced naturopath and homeopath with over 14 years in clinical practice. She runs a busy clinic in Sydney, Australia specializing in infertility, women's health and neuroendocrinology. Prior to Angela's naturopathic studies she completed three years at the School of Pharmacy, Curtin University of Technology and has a strong interest in herbal safety, particularly herb-drug interactions and pharmacology.

Angela has lectured extensively at major Naturopathic Colleges in Australia and is currently a faculty member at the Texas Chiropractic College and the University of Miami School of Medicine, Integrative Medicine Department in the United States.

In addition to her practice and education roles, Angela is a well-known featured speaker at complementary and integrative medicine conferences internationally (Australia, NZ, USA, Canada, UK). Her work has been published in distinctive complementary medicine journals in Australia and USA and she is a contributing author of the text Botanical Medicine for Women's Health by Aviva Romm published by Livingstone Churchill, USA in July 2009. Angela's clinical passion of the art and science of combining herbal medicine, clinical nutrition, homoeopathy, whole food and lifestyle medicine into dynamic clinical programs for her patients.
